CITY TO BOW IN TRIBUTE TO SOLDIER DEAD

Honors Boys Who Fought In 'War to End Wars' While Europe Seethes Again.

GRAND ARMY 'ABSENT'

Last Civil War Veteran In Hospital, G. A. R. Banner Heads Parade Column.

Mansfield will join the nation in paying tribute to its soldier dead tomorrow, and while a new generation of soldiers is spilling its blood on the battlefields of Europe, America will place flowers on the graves of men who died on the same battlefields in the "war to end all wars," only 22 years ago.

The same men, who as boys, fought the German forces across Flanders will march in the Memorial Day parade tomorrow, side by side with the veterans of another American war — that of 1898.

There will be no Civil war veterans in the parade and McLaughlin Post, G. A. R., which once numbered several hundred veterans of the Union army, will be represented only by the post banner carried at the head of the soldier column.

Mansfield's only surviving veteran of the Civil war is W. B. Hammett, 93, who has been confined to General hospital for more than a year.

Mansfield business and industry will pause tomorrow to celebrate the day. Business places and shops will close, as will all public offices and all schools.

There will be no rural or city mail deliveries. Memorial day, Postmaster Herman E. Homberger, announced. Only special delivery mail will be handled.

Parks Will Open.

Memorial Day marks the opening of the season for city parks and for Westbrook Country club and Possum Run Golf club. Liberty park will open its swimming pool for the season, even though fur-lined bathing suits may be required.

Colored residents of the city will formally open their new recreational center, Tillman park, two and a half miles north of the city, just west of North Main street road. Ex-Mayor Claude M. Hunter, Judge Charles Anderson and Rev. Andrew McCreary will take part in the morning ceremonies. The afternoon will be given over to athletic events.

Memorial services will be held at the stadium in Mansfield cemetery, with W. M. Vance, of Co-

REACHES $5,122

Red Cross War Relief Fund Needs $878 More.

The Red Cross drive for $6,000 war relief fund neared its goal today with a total of $5,122 already turned in to headquarters. This leaves $878 yet to be raised.

However, workers hope to obtain considerably more than the county's quota as the need for aid grows daily in war stricken Europe, D. O. Meese, general chairman, said.

Junior Red Cross, working on its own in the drive, with booths in the lobbys of the Ohio and Madison theaters, has collected $179. Shelby has collected $802 and the remainder of the county has contributed $286, while Mansfield's contributions today amount to $3,855.

The Red Cross office will be closed tomorrow, Memorial Day, but checks may be sent by mail.

BAER WINS IN DEM CONTEST

(Pictures on Page 3.)

G. A. Baer, "war horse" of the Democratic party in Richland county, weathered another political battle last night and today headed the party's central committee again.

Baer was re-elected chairman over two other candidates at the committee's organization meeting at the courthouse, retaining his post as party head against an attempt of the Davey forces to take the helm.

The veteran Baer, past 70 and active in county politics for 50 years, got 33 of the 61 votes cast. Atty. Marshall C. Moore received 15 and M. W. Conley, a Davey leader, 13.

Moore was re-elected secretary of the committee after he failed to win the chairmanship.

Although party leaders anticipated a heated battle over the selection of a chairman because of Davey's unpopularity with the county organization, the session drew little fire.

E. B. Kallmerten, member of the Democratic state central committee from the 17th district and head of the Davey forces in the Defense Program Gets Down to 'Brass Tacks'

Congress Tackles Job of Borrowing Three Billions, Raising Taxes; President Appoints Commission.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The defense program hit the "brass tacks" stage on two fresh essentials today:

1. Congress buckled down to the admittedly thorny problem of raising $683,000,000 a year in new taxes and of borrowing more money for the $3,000,000,000 preparedness bill.

2. A presidential commission of seven—the general staff appointed to muster the country's vast economic resources—converged on the capital to start the wheels of armaments production spinning at top speed.

The legislative blueprinting of defense details continued apace, the house dispatching to the senate a brace of newly-approved bills designed to speed up shipbuilding and to authorize a $1,137,000,000 expansion of the navy's air force and air bases. Rep. Marcantonio (AL-N. Y.) cast the only vote against them.

On defense financing, Congress appeared agreed on a two-fold approach.

The first called for an immediate increase in the national debt limit from the present $45,000,000,000 — now almost reached — to $48,000,000,000. This step would permit the flotation of $3,000,000,000 of "national defense obligations," to be paid off in five years.

The second step involved new taxes earmarked specifically to liquidate the $3,000,000,000 "national defense loan." The taxes would be effective for the five-year period, but their nature immediately stirred wide diferences of opinion.

Tentative plans were based on

SHOCK FATAL

Lima School Principal Dies After Lightning Strikes.

LIMA—(INS)—L. L. Weaver, 58-year-old principal of the Lincoln grade school at Lima, died of shock today shortly after the school building, in which were approximately 200 pupils, was struck by lightning. None of the children, in the first to sixth grades, was hurt.

Miss Effie Snyder, first grade teacher, said Weaver rushed into the room from his adjoining office shortly after the bolt struck. Upon determining that none of the pupils were injured he rushed out to sound the alarm and collapsed in the hall.

Hospital attaches said Weaver apparently suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. He was a native of Lima.

EXPEDITIONARY FORCE HUNTS TRAP ESCAPE

ALLIES CAPTURE NARVIK

English Press Indignant at Surrender by King of The Belgians.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (AP) — Britain's expeditionary force in the Flanders trap was said by reliable sources today to be fighting "stiff rear guard action" to cover its withdrawal toward the coast. The fighting was reported in complete order, without chaos or confusion. Morale of the trapped troops was termed "quite unshaken."

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Undaunted by 19 days of steady action, the British expeditionary force began a movement from Flanders towards the English channel today in a desperate attempt to get through the steel jaws of a closing German trap.

Military circles declared the British expeditionary force—aided by French units fighting with it—had started pushing towards the channel as word reached London of an Allied success in Norway—the taking of Narvik, Norwegian ore port.

Military circles refused to give the position of the British troops, whose fight to reach the channel was made more perilous by the Belgian capitulation which opened the way to a swift Nazi attack on Dunkerque.

The port was reported still in Allied hands as the British, undergoing a heavy shelling, bombing and machine gunning but still "fighting as a unit," dropped back.

The fall of Narvik was announced in a joint admiralty-war office communique. Fageness and Forsneset in Norway have also fallen to the Allies, the communique said.

British naval forces have sunk seven German transports in the last three days in waters near Narvik, according to a dispatch from Stockholm.

The British army's attitude, informed circles said, is one of

Nazis Tighten Ring of Steel Around Allies

Storm Ypres, Famous Battlefield of World War as Allies Give Way Before Assault, Try to Escape Over Channel.

BULLETIN

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD—(INS)—With artillery, air power and waves of gray-green infantry, the Germans attacked without cessation in the Montmedy sector all day today in an effort to turn the Maginot line. At 3 a. m. a heavy German artillery barrage commenced. At 4 a. m., infantry attacked through the woods. French automatic arms cut through the oncoming troops, but some managed to reach advance positions where they engaged in hand to hand fighting.

(By Associated Press)

In three pulverizing smashes, Hitler's Nazi legions today stormed Ypres — famed World war battlefield — and captured Lille and Ostend, the high command announced, to tighten the steel-jawed trap on 700,000 Allied troops encircled in Flanders.

On the strength of these reports, it was apparent that the Allies were now retiring to the English channel—seeking that means of escape from the German "surrender or die" onslaught rather than attempting to break through the German salient to the south.

The Berlin short-wave radio reported the capture of Ypres, 20 miles from the coast.

Ostedn is the strategic Belgian channel port, one of the main bases of supplies for the harassed French and British forces.

The Nazi high command said desperate French counter-attacks had been beaten off "with the bloodiest losses."

The British admiralty meanwhile announced the capture of Narvik, Arctic iron ore port in Norway, where a German garrison has been under siege more than six weeks.

German capture of Ostend narrowed the "back door" of the trapped Allied forces to a width of about 40 miles.

Wave after wave of Nazi bombing planes roared over the French and British forces falling back to the sea, but the British expeditionary force was reported "still fighting as a unit" in the harried withdrawal.

London military circles said the B. E. F. had retreated "some miles toward the coast."

This was the first indication that the encircled Allies were attempting to escape by channel ports—even at the risk of undergoing a "hellish fire" such as attended the British embarkation from Boulogne—rather than trying a break through the German corridor to reach the main French armies in France.

Fighting in the streets of Dunkirk was reported by Berlin sources who intimated that the Swastika flag might be hoisted at any moment over the port, main supply base of the northern Allied armies pocketed in Flanders.

The French admitted that the situation in the north was "extremely critical" as a result of the capitulation

Former Premier Tells How Leopold Decided to Give Up

(By United Press)

PARIS—Here, in a first person account as terse and tragic as a coroner's report, is the story of how the king of the Belgians gave up his army as dawn caressed an old Belgian chateau.

The shy, curly-haired king arrived at his bombshell decision at 5 a. m. Saturday after an all night argument with four of his cabinet members.

The five men met in the Chateau of Wynondal, near Thourout south of Bruges, then 50 miles from the advancing German troops.

The story of that meeting was related to the United Press by a heartsore, weary man, Paul-Henri Spaak, Belgian foreign minister and former premier.

With Spaak at the chateau were Premier Hubert Pierlot, Lieut. Gen. Henri Denys, Defense Minister, and Interior Minister A. Van Der Poorten.

Here is Spaak's account of the Wynondal chateau meeting:

"The king's decision was taken at Wynondal castle at 5 a. m. Saturday.

"He invited the cabinet to his residence and told us frankly that latest military report showed the Belgian army was bearing the

Germans Take Lille And Ostend In Drive

British Fall Back, Attempt to Move Troops Across Channel In Face Of New Nazi Advances.

of the Belgian army, but said the Allies still were holding a 30-mile stretch of coast extending northward from Dunkirk.

Unofficial reports that the French were massing their armies of the center for a drive to relieve the pressure in Flanders were given color by a Paris communique announcing new successes along the Somme and Aisne rivers.

The last German forces on the south side of the Somme were reported driven back across the river and the French said the situation there was "highly favorable."

The French declared the Germans were suffering heavy casualties in their attempts to clean out the Flanders pocket, and the Nazis admitted their losses were large, but held they were not disproportionate to their gains.

Germans bombed the pocketed Allied forces mercilessly in an attempt to "soften up" resistance, and the Allies retaliated by strafing Nazi ground troops and bombing fuel reserves at Bremen and Hamburg.

The Allied armies of the center apparently were concentrating their efforts in two separate sectors.

One Allied push was reported in the area of the Somme river. Another attack was poised farther east, along the Aisne river, where 30 divisions, or between 450,000 and 600,000 men, were massed.

On the outcome of these efforts may rest the fate of the British expeditionary force and French troops which rushed to the aid of Belgium, whose king, Leopold III, surrendered his army unconditionally to the Nazis yesterday.

The Germans pounded on with all their might of air power, tanks and artillery on the Allied divisions crushed into a triangle around Lille.

Nazis described this area as being based on the channel coast, about 40 miles wide but tapered sharply to about 25 miles and reaching a point at St. Armand, about 20 miles southeast of Lille.

The British shielded their plans to aid their trapped force but it was apparent the navy and air force were looked on to do their part.

Italy appeared nearer war than ever. Civilians started taking over the jobs of Italians called to the colors. War fever mounted in the wake of Belgian capitulation.

French Claim Victories Over Nazis In South

(By United Press)

PARIS—An army spokesman reported today that French forces wiped out three German bridgeheads south of the River Somme while forces in the north inflicted heavy losses as they withdrew in the face of enemy pressure.

The French asserted that the entire south bank of the Somme is now in their control and that French bridgeheads have been established at several points on the north bank. These bridgeheads might be employed as the spearhead of a counter-offensive should one be ordered.

Military sources and the high command made plain that the French lines along the Somme and the Aisne are being strengthened to withhold any fresh German drive south after the action in the north has been completed.

Throughout the night, after desertion by the Belgian army, the French and British fought, retreating slowly, against continuous German attacks, an army spokesman said, and kept up the fight today.

The army spokesman said, and the French high command asserted officially, that the Allied army, taking the full force of an attack by overwhelmingly superior forces, was fighting valorously and inflicting enormous losses on the Germans.

Through last night, the spokesman said, fighting continued unabated, the Germans seeking to press their overwhelming advantage in numbers and equipment, the Allied rear guards stubbornly resisting, holding them back so that the bulk of the army, at least, could escape.

The situation was again what it had been last week when the Germans drove through their wedge—into France—what the army informant called melee on a nightmare scale, in which groups of men, little and big, fought to the death in individual action, and Allied mechanized units, tanks and armored cars, slashed back into the lines of the advancing Germans, tangling up the German advance guards into an inextricable mass of fighting men and then getting back—if they could.

Over the German advance lines, it was reported, now swept scores and hundreds of new American-made planes, bombers and crack Curtiss fighters, thrown into action as quickly as they arrived.

The way to the coast was still open. An army spokesman asserted this morning that the French still held Dunkirk, the chief Allied base on the coast, and even had men still in Calais.

The army spokesman said frankly that the position of the northern army was very critical but asserted that it was fighting its way out heroically, and holding its own in General Maxime Weygand's considered plan of withdrawal, under which they had been engaged in a retiring action since last week, long before the collapse of the Belgian army, when it had been recognized that German pressure in the north made the Allied Ghent line untenable, and that to make a stand meant entrapment because of the German channel wedge.

A spokesman said the Germans suffered "horrible carnage" at the price of their attacks yesterday along the River Lys when the final phase of the Allied withdrawal was started.

It was emphasized that Allied planes were bombing and machine-gunning the Germans day and night, trying to disrupt their communications and relieve pressure on the retreating armies.

B. E. F. FACES GERMAN TRAP

London Told Situation Grave As Army Rages Over Nazi 'Atrocities.'

"furious rage against the Germans, caused not by the pounding they have received but by the incredibly revolting scenes in which the German air force and tanks had deliberately slaughtered helpless refugee women and children to spread panic among the civilian population."

"These are things," they continued, "the army can never forget, and they will insure the Germans the warmest welcome they have ever received anywhere if they invade this country."

In a broadcast to the nation, Alfred Duff Cooper, minister of information, said grimly last night that it would be "necessary to withdraw our army from the positions they now occupy" as a result of surrender of King Leopold and his Belgian army.

A gloomy nation was told the B. E. F. was in peril as grave as that of the British who met disaster at Gallipoli in the World war, when the Allies were routed by the Turks.

The British morning press pulled no punches in telling the public of the dark picture and in denouncing the young Belgian monarch as a traitor for his capitulation against the advice of his government.

However, both Prime Minister Churchill and his minister of information asked the people to suspend judgment, and today Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, who as a special British liaison officer was with Leopold until late Monday night, issued a statement hinting there were certain important facts attending the surrender that were not yet generally known.

Nevertheless the man in the street and the press accused Leopold of laying a trap for the Allied forces. The bitterest denunciation came from the tabloid Mirror, which cartooned Leopold as a crowned serpent with the caption: "Gentlemen, the King!" and described him in an editorial as a "skunk."

Grocer at Shelby Leaps In Time as Train Hits Auto

SHELBY—Dennis Hohler, Shelby grocer, leaped to safety yesterday afternoon a moment before a fast Big Four freight train struck his car and carried it nearly a half mile along the tracks.

Hohler, who escaped without a scratch, told police his car stalled on the raised West Main street crossing and before he could get the engine started the locomotive was bearing down on him.

He jumped out just before the northbound train crashed into the car. The impact knocked the motor out of his car and damaged steps on the locomotive. The automobile, which was demolished, was carried on the locomotive to the Gamble street crossing before the train was stopped.

brunt of attack and suffering heavy losses.

"In his opinion, he said, the Belgian army should withdraw from the war.

"We made a last effort to convince the king, to get him to listen to our pleas to quit the army and go either to France or England, leaving the active field command to the Belgian general staff.

"The king refused. He said he had no intention of quitting Belgian soil, and invited us to remain with him to await the arrival of the Germans.

"In the face of the king's formal declaration we told him frankly that we did not share his views on surrender, and we begged him to leave with us immediately. Our efforts were futile, so at 5 a. m. when daylight came, we quit the castle and went to Dunkirk.

"We did not want, by our presence alongside the king at Wynondal, to appear to sanction his decision," Spaak said.

The world learned of the king's decision at 4 a. m. yesterday when French Premier Paul Reynaud, in a bitter radio broadcast, announced the capitulation of the Belgian army on the order of King Leopold that morning.

Premier Pierlot said the king's act was "illegal and unconstitutional" and that a new Belgian army would be formed in France and continue to fight.

DEFENSE PLAN GETS DOWN TO 'BRASS TACKS'

Congress Ready to Increase Debt 3 Billions, FDR Names Commission.

10 per cent boosts in the income and certain excise taxes. Even heavier increases were under consideration for liquor, cigaret and gasoline levies.

As finance committees in both houses began spadework on the tax question, the seven members named by President Roosevelt yesterday to form a national defense commission were asked to hold their first meeting here tomorrow.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the six men and one woman would have the job of seeing that defense orders are filled as expeditiously as possible, without upsetting the normal trend of things more than necessary.

The appointments evoked critical comment from Alf M. Landon, 1936 Republican presidential nominee. He called it a "cap and gown commission," and said that the president failed "to recognize the necessity of calling in experts in mass production." In this regard, Landon added that three appointees whom he did not name, qualified as experts.

The commission:

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the board of United States Steel, who will supervise the production of raw materials.

William S. Knudsen, the General Motors production wizard, who will be concerned exclusively with manufacturing problems.

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, responsible for matters involving labor.

Chester C. Davis, member of the Federal Reserve board and former director of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, who will integrate the farmer's part.

Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, the transportation specialist.

Miss Harriet Elliott of the University of North Carolina, guardian of consumer interests.

Chairman Harrison (D.-Miss.) of the senate finance committee, said there was no reason why Congress could not finish the defense tax program in ample time for adjournment before the Republican national convention, June 24.

Indications materialized quickly, however, that the tax program did not meet universal favor.

Senator Wheeler (D.-Mont.) called it a "stop-gap". He said he favored a suggestion by Senator Byrd (D.-Va.) that a 10 per cent cut be made in government expenditures other than those for defense purposes.

General Calls for U. S. Entry Into the War.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Major General John F. O'Ryan, commander of the 27th division in the World war flatly asserted today that the United States should enter the war on the side of the Allies.

"A thousand fighting airplanes and bombers sent from the army and navy to the aid of the Allies now would be of greater value to our American interests in a defense way than would the sending of three or four times that number, six months from now," O'Ryan asserted in an interview.

"The effect under international law would be to create a state of war between the United States and Germany."

An interviewer commented: "General—you are asking for a declaration of war!"

"Absolutely!" O'Ryan answered emphatically.

RUTH HIGH WILL WED C. K. DYE ON JUNE 22

Four Sisters Disclose Date at Evening Party Last Night; Ceremony to Be Read at First Lutheran Church.

FOUR SISTERS entertained last night at the Susie Janis home with a party for 38 friends at which they announced the engagement, and approaching marriage of another sister. Hostesses were Mrs. C. D. Stone, Mrs. C. G. Knarr, Mrs. R. M. Young and Miss Marjorie High. When Marjorie Jane Young walked among the guests distributing small corsages in pastel shades from a pastel-tinted May basket the wedding date of Miss Ruth M. High was disclosed by tiny cards attached to the flowers.

Miss High, who is the daughter of Mrs. Mary A. High, 70 Ausdale avenue, will become the bride of C. K. Dye, 83 Ausdale avenue, June 22 at 2:30 p. m. at the First Lutheran church. Dr. G. E. Swoyer will officiate at the quiet, informal ceremony.

Bridge and hearts were played at eight tables with prizes going to Mrs. Harry Schlegel, Mrs. J. A. McDermid, Miss Nellie Dilmore, Mrs. Robert Fry, and Mrs. R. V. Schotta.

The U-shaped table at which guests were seated was decorated with two minature carts drawn by crystal swans was filled with pastel tinted flowers. Two branch candelabra holding pastel tinted candles completed the setting. Each place was marked by a cellophane package of minature powder puffs laid on a bed of greenery to represent a flower.

Miss High was presented with several gifts by her sisters at the close of the evening. Among the guests were Miss Dilmore and Mrs. Wade Arbaugh, Canton, and Miss Hazel Bricker, Shelby.

The first in a series of pre-nuptial parties honoring Miss High will be given June 5 at the Susie Janis home by the Misses Ada Steward, Florence Case and Vera Kelly.

With MARIANNE

WITH a holiday tomorrow, of course we're all hoping for a nice, warm sunny day. . . . But if the sun does shine, and you plan to be outdoors, you'd best be careful so that you don't get sunburned. . . . There are many fine protectives on the market now, so you needn't have unnecessary discomfort. . . . The newest thing in years has been introduced by a leading woman cosmetic manufacturer—capsules (which can easily be carried and used as the need arises) filled with oils to prevent burning, but which give an even tan—"cafe," if a dark tan is desired, and "honey," if you prefer a lighter one. . . . Suntan lotion, a non-oily liquid, will prevent burning, but give an even tan—as does another similar lotion which also repels mosquitos and other insects. . . . Then there are some women who like to keep their "peaches and cream" complexions all summer long—and if you're one of this group, you'll find an anti-sunburn cream to be just the thing, as it prohibits both tanning and burning.

If yours is going to be a dressed-up holiday and week-end, you'll find that dark sheers are smart, comfortable and wrinkle resistant.... Of these frocks, black seems to be the most popular tone when brightened with touches of white. . . . I saw several of these dresses yesterday, and they all were very stylish with tucks, gathers, unpressed pleats and shirred waistline features—brightened at the neckline with collars of fluffy organdy. . . . Hand painted sheers are also very attractive and unusual. One of the prettiest of these that I've seen is in brown and white—a two-piece effect with brown sheer trim, brown buttons and belt. . . . The brown paint is brushed on creamy white chiffon and then artistically blended to create the effect of a motley design.

One of the most important complements of any costume is the purse you carry, and the newest purses in the downtown stores now are those of off-white cape in under-arm and pouch styles with dark linings, ripple designs and gold trim. . . . White washable straws are brightened with colored raffia motifs. . . . Something else new in white purses are those made of spun glass—this thin white material has been worked into a pleated effect and bound with grosgrain ribbon in white, red, blue, green or black. . . . Polka-dotted linings in these shades add a colorful note, and each purse contains a matching make-up kit and coin purse. . . . Envelope styled zipper purses are also smart in white, blue, red and black linen, appliqued with designs in contrasting shades of patent leather—and then for a special summertime convenience, these purses are lined with patent leather of the same color as the design on the outside.

WHITE coats are always stylish for wear on cool evenings in summertime (and from the look of things so far, we're going to have a lot of them this season) but this year, pastel coats are especially good—plain tones or tweed mixtures, they come in beige, soft shades of blue, pink and honey.

DID YOU KNOW that you now can blush your way to beauty? A skin management program, recently introduced in Mansfield, does just that for you. . . . In three simple steps, which take only about five minutes, you can aid nature in bringing out your natural beauty through the proper cleansing, effective stimulation and careful protection of your skin. . . . Cleansing can be accomplished through soil-absorbing hydronized oils, while the blushing cream stimulates your skin by bringing increased circulation to it and feeding it from within. . . . To protect your face from the elements which cause blemishes, roughness and harshness, is a complexion dress which furnishes a protective film—and since it is invisible, you don't look made-up while wearing it, but instead, just like your natural self—with a more radiant beauty of skin. . . . This company's powder has been compounded from a blend of fine powders sifted through soft silk, and its lip and cheek rouges are colors designed to harmonize with your own blood color—a real compliment to your complexion.

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION ++

CHAPTER XXII

Irene's eyes were piercing. "You came out on the ship with Tony? Oh, I see. Brooke hasn't a cocktail,' darling." She laughed her husky, musical laugh. "Stop staring and go get her one. I won't let her run away."

He went reluctantly. Brooke stood still. She wondered if she were swaying on the high blue heels. Her head was light. And she was trembling so that it occurred to her that she would not be able to hold the cocktail when Tony brought it.

Irene lifted her firm pointed chin. Though her eyes were restless and troubled, she laughed again. "If I could think of anything clever, I wouldn't say that this is a small world."

Brooke, valiant, too, said, "I didn't know that Tony was your son. He didn't mention your name and I thought that . . . that you were going to Hawaii."

"Of course you did." Irene said kindly. "We intended to but we had to change our plans at the last minute. You came out with . . ."

"With Mrs. Kingsbury. We are leaving for Hawaii tomorrow."

Obviously relieved, Irene said, "How nice!" Before she could say more, a woman guest claimed her and she moved away, saying to Brooke, "Thank you for being sweet to Tony," and went across the room, leaving Brooke still wondering if she were swaying. Her throat felt parched, her eyes were taking swift flights over the crowded, noisy, smoky room. They came to rest finally upon the tall figure of Rod just entering the room.

He saw her. He was so shocked his face was expressionless. She knew he was trying to decide whether or not to come to her, and what attitude, if he came, to use with her. Had he changed? Not in appearance. He was wearing brown (his most becoming color, she had told him often) and his face, usually pale from an indoor life, had a healthy tan. He looked splendid.

She couldn't bear it if he came, she thought, and she couldn't bear it if he did not come. She felt herself weakening, weeping in her heart because she could not weep here in this huge, elegant room filled to overflowing with important people. All memories of him seemed to rush upon her . . . Of what he was thinking? What was he feeling?

She saw him make his way to her . . .

"Why Brooke . . ."

She made her trembling mouth smile. "I am as surprised as you are, Rod." But, though she longed to be flippant and amusing and indifferent, she couldn't be—because she had never learned how to be. "How are you? You look—fine." And because words helped, she went on more quickly, "I came out with Mrs. Kingsbury and met Tony on the ship." She could be cruel and say, "Your stepson." Looking up at him, she saw nothing except shock and embarrassment on the square, handsome face.

She thought, "It's elegant, Rod, what Tony bitterly calls the 'set-up' here." She wanted to laugh at herself because she had visualized them in Hawaii—had wondered what she would do if she happened upon them there. In the end, she thought, if this were the end, she had shocked Rod into speechlessness. But she did not want to laugh at him or at Tony or at Irene. Queer that now, though tomorrow she would probably feel quite different, she liked Irene . . . Liked Irene—when she had thought she hated her. . . .

Recovering, Rod said, "You look fine, too, Brooke . . ."

She wondered whether people felt like this when they were drunk—light-headed, silly, aching to talk just to be talking. . . .

"I am," she said brightly, her voice breaking a little. "I, that is, Mrs. Kingsbury and I, are going to Hawaii tomorrow." Where was Tony? She felt as if she were breaking into little pieces. . . .

"I've thought about you a lot, Brooke, and . . ." Rod said, low. He cleared his throat—his voice wouldn't go on. And she saw that his hand was unsteady when he drew a silver cigaret case from his pocket and opened it.

She heard Tony's voice before she saw him.

"Do you know him, too?" he asked cheerfully. "Say, where have I been? I thought I'd told you all about myself, Brooke. Sorry I was detained. Had to listen to a story of a big deal that didn't go through . . ."

She thought, "Rod, we must pretend. We must!"

But Tony, sensitive, saw the strain, their embarrassment. And Brooke saw beads of perspiration suddenly appear on his forehead, saw all joy swept from his eyes.

Tony said tightly, "I'm sorry. I . . ." to Rod, "Excuse us, will you?" And to Brooke, "Let's get out of here."

Brooke did not look back as Tony guided her through the guests and outside to the car. He drove at a high speed through the rolling hills.

She sat quietly, shaking, wildness in her thoughts, unleashed again, remembering Irene's brilliant smile and the liveliness shocked out of her eyes; Rod, immovable, withdrawn and uncomfortable; thinking that Tony's next move and his next speech were unpredictable. The faces came and went until there was only Rod's square face, his uneasy voice. . . . She thought, "I'd give ten years of my life to know what he was thinking then; what his thoughts have been since he married Irene. . . . If only I knew!" Her heart ached, the old bruise hurt again.

Looking ahead, his jaw sharp, Tony said, "It was Rod, wasn't it? What a fool I am! It was the one thing I didn't tell you because I didn't want to jump at conclusions until I'd met him. And I liked him, probably because I expected something far worse when she wrote that he wasn't much older than I am. I expected some sort of beautiful playboy and found that he was sane and serious, and substantial. It might even last! But how . . ."

In a controlled voice she spoke to his set profile, telling what now seemed so brief a story of her coming to New York, the afternoon at Barney's and the telegram in the night weeks later. . . .

Tony cried, "Cruel!" Then, his words rushing, "I haven't any illusions about my mother, Brooke. She hasn't any about herself but she's honest to the core. When we're alone sometime, she'll tell me all about this. She'll say she knew how rottenly unfair it was to you, and all that . . . You have no defense against her honesty. She's been hurt so much herself, and yet she isn't callous. She'll help any one. I sound as if I'm defending her, don't I? Perhaps I am. I can't help it. She wanted him—and I want you. . . ."

They rode on without speaking. Brooke's thoughts in chaos again. She held her breath and thought: "I could marry Tony and make it very difficult and embarrassing for Rod and Irene. I could weaken now and let him love me." But the effort would cost her too much. Revenge is most expensive for one who seeks it. Sometimes, she thought, you hate your mind for the ugliness it can create. . . .

Finally she said, "I'm going away tomorrow, Tony and . . ."

"I'm going with you."

"No, you are not. I couldn't see you. There'd be constant friction!"

"I can't go back there! Every time we'd look at each other . . ."

She was thinking more of Tony now than of herself, Tony who had become a responsibility.

"You can go back to school and take your degree and demand your freedom. In the end you'll probably turn to banking and a girl they approve of."

He stopped the car abruptly at the top of a hill and drew her to him. Miserably, he said, "Don't get maternal about me, Brooke."

Her face against his smooth face, she closed her eyes, weakening an instant when he kissed her, thinking that perhaps the devotion she felt for him would be enough . . . drawing away, pushing back her hair when she knew that it was rest she needed more than anything else now and that tomorrow, when she left, she would be glad to go alone.

"You wouldn't marry me, would, Brooke?"

She smiled at him kindly. "And face the executors? No, Tony. You're in no position to marry now. You said so yourself. There are too many things unfinished, too many loose ends. We can't run away from facts. . . ."

"Yes, you're right. But when am I going to see you again?"

"See me again?" Brooke repeated. "No," she said slowly to Tony, "before I return, Mrs. Kingsbury hasn't said how long we'll stay at Hawaii but when we come back, we'll probably stop a few days here between ships or trains—if she decides to go back east by train. . . ."

Tony glanced away. "You're the only person I've ever known with whom I could be myself, spouting a lot of pretty theories, believing in them, living in myself, conscious of the beauty of natural things, not liking people much. But I've never told you this either—that I want to write, that one or two people have encouraged me. One of my professors said, 'Writing is the result of a deep and rich experience. Go out and live first.' That's one of the reasons I've rebelled at the rulings of powers that be. There's so much to see, and I want to see it all."

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

My first emotion upon seeing that the door to my study from the library was slightly ajar was one of horrified surprise. My eyes leaped to Philip Veritzen's face and the tension lifted a bit, for he was stationed with his back to the study door, and could not possibly guess that somebody was surreptitiously watching the rehearsal.

The anger rushed over me in a primitive impulse to strike and tear. Noel had promised me he would do nothing to betray his presence in the study. There was a tiny grill over the door directly opposite Mary's entrance, through which he could hear everything, and by standing on a chair he could catch glimpses of Mary, which I knew was all he wished. But he evidently had wished to witness the triumph of his beloved from a better angle, and taking advantage of the rushing tempo of the rehearsal and the absorption of everyone in Mary's marvelous performance, he had set the door ajar.

There was much to be said from his viewpoint, I told myself, trying to be just. The chances of anyone discovering him were almost nil, but the danger was there. If Mary should see him, it might well break the tempo of the magnificent performance she was giving.

But it was not that remote possibility, for I knew Noel must be taking all possible precautions against discovery—which changed my anger to anxiety. I knew that from the vantage point of the door Mary's young husband could see what I had just seen, the expression on the face of Stephen Redfield, handsome and talented leading man of the production, as he looked at Mary.

If ever a man's face spelled the "dawning of the tender passion" it was that of Mary's leading man, and I knew that the sight was not a salutary one for Mary's husband, who, I surmised, was secretly fighting a daily battle to keep his lovely and gifted young wife from suspecting how deep was his aversion to having her take up a stage career. He was inordinately proud of her beauty and her talent—no son of Philip Veritzen could fail to recognize and thoroughly approve dramatic genius.

On one thing I was determined. That door must not remain ajar a moment longer than it was possible to close it. But I could not move from my chair without attracting Philip Veritzen's attention.

There was but one person in the room whose position was not fixed by the requirements of the rehearsal. That was Lillian and I saw that by good fortune she was behind Philip Veritzen, not too far from the study door, and yet within range of my eyes.

It was seconds before I caught her eye, then made her an almost imperceptible signal to watch me. With a wary eye on Philip Veritzen, I put a hand up to one side of my mouth, shielding the movement of my lips from everyone save Lillian, and then mouthed silently over and over: "Shut the study door!"

She is an accomplished lip-reader, and she soon gave me the slight nod of acquiesence which told me that she had grasped my message.

When I ventured to glance at her again she was leaning forward in her chair, apparently as absorbed in Mary's performance as were the rest of the auditors, but that she had been waiting to catch my eye, I knew when she gave me the signal which between us means "all right," and with the feeling that I crossed, if not "one more river," at least another creek. I gave myself up again to reveling in Mary's brilliant performance.

HOW TO MAKE A GIFT OF FOWERS

When picking flowers which are to be given as gifts to friends, choose those which are only half-open, rather than blooms which have fully opened. Your friends will be able to enjoy such flowers much longer, since they will not fade as quickly as blooms picked when fully blown.

It should be remembered also that there is a wrong and a right way to wrap flowers intended for gifts, particularly those which must be carried for some distance. The right and the wrong ways of wrapping flowers in paper are shown in today's Garden-Graph. The right way to wrap them shows the flowers completely covered with paper, and carefully tied with string. Proper wrapping is important because cut flowers wilt quickly when subject to sunlight and wind, or when placed in draughts.

Wrapping the cut ends of the flower stalks in damp moss, or a piece of wet cloth, and then wrapping the flowers in paper, helps to keep them in good condition until they can be delivered. Do not use cotton or wool for this purpose as these materials absorb moisture, thus robbing the flowers.

Memorial Day Offering.

PARTICULARLY fitting for a Memorial Day picture attraction is the Ohio's offering, "Abe Lincoln In Illinois" with Raymond Massey. The play, written by Ohio's Robert E. Sherwood, deals with the formative years of Lincoln's life, his romance with Ann Rutledge, his attempt to elude his high destiny, and his political battles which led him to the presidency. Raymond Massey, who won distinction in the stage play, is seen as Lincoln. It opens today and runs through Thursday.

Double Feature At Madison.

Jane Withers, who is rapidly growing up in the evening clothes of a young woman, retains her little girl personality in "Shooting High" in which she co-stars with Cowboy Gene Autry. The picture is shown at the Madison today and tomorrow, along with "Tear Gas Squad," in which John Payne and Dennis Morgan as rookie cops, fight for the favors of Gloria Dickson. A youngster on the force lives up to its finest traditions.

Sherlock McCarthy.

Charlie McCarthy turns detective in his latest picture in which he is inevitably co-starred with Edgar Bergen and aided—or hindered—by Mortimer Snerd. Charlie dresses up like Sherlock Holmes after a murder is committed at a garden party and attempts to solve it. Constance Moore, Edgar Kennedy and John Sutton are in the cast of "Charlie McCarthy, Detective." The Ritz also is offering the impressive historical drama "Tower of London."

Three-Star Attraction.

Claudette Colbert, Don Ameche and John Barrymore are a combination of box-office appeal in "Midnight," a romantic comedy-drama which the Park shows the last half of the week. Two of the screen's promising youngsters are featured in "Tomboy." They are Marcia Mae Jones and Jackie Moran in a story of a poor farm boy who wanted to be a lawyer, and a small girl who wanted to live in the country to get away from hotel life.

Death Shocks Hollywood.

Walter Connolly, one of Hollywood's top bracket character actors whose sudden death yesterday shocked his fellow workers as well as his legion of fans, has a major role in "High Grey Walls," a Majestic offering. He is seen as a country doctor who frustrates a prison break. Connolly has a long list of fine performances on his movie record. The second feature is "The Secret of Dr. Kildare" in which Laraine Day, who has just scored a hit in "My Son, My Son," is teamed with Lew Ayres.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

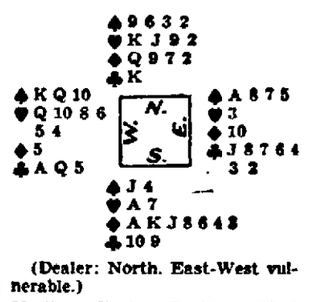
"The Authority on Authorities"

WASTING TWO FOR ONE

Overtaking your partner's honor to gain the lead is winning play on some occasions, but it involves a definite risk which should be weighed consciously. Every time you play one of your honors, you promote some lower card to a position nearer the top in that suit. Is the principal card promoted one which your side holds, or one in possession of the enemy? And, if the latter, is the advantage of getting the lead enough to outweigh the other factor?



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♦	1 ♥
2 ♦	3 ♣	5 ♦	Dbl
Pass	Pass	Rdbl

Inasmuch as the contract can be beaten by three immediate top tricks, South's redouble seems rather over-ambitious. But he was against opponents prone to err on the defense, and perhaps counted on their play as worth a trick to him. They delivered the goods as he expected, and early in the game. West led the spade K, then the Q. East decided his partner might have held a doubleton and therefore couldn't score a third spade at once, so overtook the Q with his A and then led a third spade, ruffed by South.

Quick as a flash the declarer ran game, cashing a high diamond, the heart A, the heart J on a finesse, the heart K for one club discard and the set-up spade 9 for a toss of the remaining club. From the fact that West did not lead the J to the second trick, East could have read declarer for that card, and hence should have feared the 9 which he could see in dummy.

This odd hand was played in the big spring tournament at the Skytop club, in the Pennsylvania Poconos. At one table psychic bidding by North got South into 3-No Trumps, which he made with the first 11 tricks when West led the 5 of his partner's club suit. Had he led the A, his side could have taken the first 11 tricks.

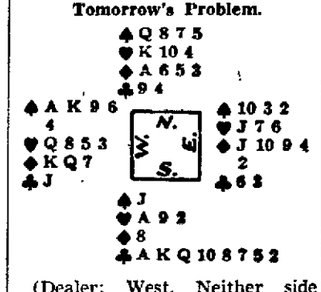
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable).

After leading the spake K and diamond K to the A, what cards should West hold as he discards against South's run of clubs, in order to prevent a double squeeze to make 5-Clubs doubled?

PLAN WEDDING

BUCYRUS—Announcement has been made of the approaching nuptials June 9 of Miss Martha Jane Schieber, 730 Tiffin street, Bucyrus vocalist and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Schieber and Kenneth Collins of Mt. Vernon, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Collins of Kent.

The announcement was made at a party at the Schieber home Monday night. The wedding will take place in Epworth Methodist church in an afternoon ceremony.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, May 30.

DOUBTFUL, perplexing and conflicting conditions are read from the challenging chain of astral configurations. While there will be much surprising activity, with fresh contacts and strange developments not looked for, including the intervention of new persons in the affairs and with benefit, yet there is the menace of some peculiar if not sinister entanglements o fa treacherous nature. Beware intrigues and subtlety and confer with elders if in doubt.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of rather peculiar or unusual experiences, with danger from deception, treachery and entanglements of a subtle and dangerous quality. New and fresh matters may intrigue but in anxious situations it is safe to rely on elders or old friends, although all strangers are not to be shunned. Changes hold some benefits.

A child born on this day is likely to have some talents out of the ordinary, with much originality and imagination. It may be impressionable, intuitive and possibly mystical.

Mansfield Edges Mudhens, 10-9, For Fourth Straight

Laurila Halts Tiffin Splurge In 7th Inning

Losers Score Eight Times In That Frame; Stan Kudelvitz to Toe Rubber at Fairground Tonight.

MANAGER DEWEY STOVER and his Mansfield Braves nearly blew a nine-run lead at Tiffin last night as they marked up their fourth straight Ohio State league triumph by edging the Mudhens, 10 to 9.

Three Brave moundsmen paraded to the hill in the seventh inning as Tiffin sent eight runs over the plate, but George Laurila, the third hurler, snuffed out the splurge and pitched shutout ball the rest of the way.

Mansfield returns to the Fairground to face Tiffin under the floodlights at 8:15 p. m. today and Stover is expected to call on Stan Kudelvitz, lefthander, to face the Mudhens.

The victory enabled the Braves to tighten their grip on third place and left them three and a half games behind the pace-making Findlay Oilers.

Stover and his warriors piled up a 10 to 1 advantage before the pitching staff weakened. Bob Arnold, who started the game and received credit for the win, walked the first three men in the seventh.

Lloyd "Deacon" Joyce was rushed to his aid, but Joyce walked two more and Tiffin sandwiched three hits among the walks to score six times. Stover called on Laurila.

Tiffin forged ahead with a 1-0 lead in the third frame last night, but Mansfield tallied twice in the fourth to take a lead it never relinquished. The Braves added a marker in the fifth, three in the sixth and finished it off with four in the seventh.

The Mudhens committed eight errors and all of them figured in the Mansfield scoring. Only two of the Mansfield runs were earned.

Matt Miazga was the important cog at the plate for the Braves last night. The new left fielder secured "four for five" to pace Mansfield's 13-hit attack.

Al Hundemer, Eldon Dice and Carl Foldenauer each added two hits to the total. Cassini, with two doubles and a single, led Tiffin at the plate The Mansfield tossers limited Tiffin to nine hits, but the bingles followed free tickets.

Mansfield is scheduled for a doubleheader at Lima against the second-place Pandas The Braves will be at the Fairground for single games Saturday and Sunday. The Saturday affray against Findlay will get under way at 3 p. m.

FINDLAY EXTENDS OHIO STATE LEAGUE LEAD

FINDLAY—(AP)—Fletcher's four-hit hurling helped Findlay extend its Ohio State league lead last night with a 13 to 2 trouncing of Fostoria.

Aided by Tiffin's six errors Mansfield edged into third place by virtue of a 10 to 9 win. Wet grounds at Lima kept the Pandas and Fremont idle.

33-Car Field Almost Ready For 28th Annual 500-Mile Race.

By HAROLD HARRISON

INDIANAPOLIS—(AP)—An Italian mechanic worked frantically today to get a French soldier's speedster in shape to have a full 33-car field for the 28th annual 500-mile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway tomorrow.

The 33-car field was complete but one of them, an Ital-Maserati driven by Rene Lebegue, a Frenchman, threw a piston arm through the crankshaft in a practice run yesterday. After first saying the car was "out of the race" Bernard Musnik, manager of the French team of Lebegue and Rene Dreyfus, said the car could be repaired and would be in the race.

Lougi Chinetti is the Italian mechanic who came to this country with Lebegue and Dreyfus.

Thirty-six cars qualified for the race but, since only 33 can start, Dreyfus, Louis Durant of Herrington, Kans., and Tony Willman of Milwaukee, Wis., were eliminated for having the slowest speeds.

Billy Devore of St. John, Kans., and Floyd Davis of Springfield, Ill., won starting places yesterday.

The qualifying average speed this year was a fraction under 123 miles an hour. Last year it was 123.356.

Two former winenrs — Shaw, victor in 1937 and 1939, and Kelly Petillo of Los Angeles, winner in 1935—are in the starting field.

Rex Mays of Glendale, Calif., won the pole spot in the first row with a speed of 127.850 miles an hour but that was approximately three miles an hour under Jimmy Snyder's pole position speed a year ago.

* * *

The race will begin promptly at 11 a. m. (EST) tomorrow. Generally fair weather was forecast.

1939 Champs Even Series

Blues Stay Out In Front By Defeating Millers.

(By Associated Press)

For a ball club that has a new outfield and a new pitching staff Kansas City's defending champions seem to be doing passably well.

The Blues had a four-game lead on the second-place Millers when they went to Minneapolis for the second meeting of the two teams. Minneapolis won Monday 4 to 3.

The Blues evened the series yesterday with a 6 to 4 victory, leaving the Millers just where they started in their efforts to overtake the leaders.

Johnny Marcum, ex-major leaguer, turned in a fine eight-hitter to give Toledo a 2 to 1 victory over Indianapolis in 14 innings. Seventh-place Toledo now is only two games behind Milwaukee in fourth.

The Brewers bowed before St. Paul's cellar team, 7 to 1, being helpless before the baffling curves of Art Herring, who gave up only six hits. Gil English hit a homer, triple, double and single, driving in four St. Paul runs.

Louisville and Columbus were rained out.

Yankees Back In America's First Division

New York Apparently Finds Trail That Leads to Fifth Consecutive Pennant.

(By Associated Press)

WITHOUT fanfare or fireworks the New York Yankees have arrived back in the first division of the American league and apparently have finally found the trail that can lead to their coveted fifth consecutive world championship.

The Yanks humbled the Washington Senators 12-4 and 3-1 in a doubleheader yesterday to attain six victories in their last seven games—in fact, nine victories in 12 games since that demoralizing eight-game losing streak.

Today New York is only 6½ games out of first place and easily can be riding the crest before the Fourth of July.

In subduing the Senators, the McCarthymen tallied 12 runs on 14 hits in the first game with Bill Dickey hitting his first homer of the season with two on and Joe Gordon getting a home run and two doubles. Rookie Marvin Breuer limited Washington to seven hits in the second game with Buddy Lewis' home run costing him a shutout.

The Red Sox tightened their hold on first place at least temporarily by beating the Philadelphia Athletics 4-1 in a night game after the second place Cleveland Indians had lost to Detroit 8-5.

Boston got six of its hits in the last two frames to break a 1-1 deadlock that Dennis Galehouse and Johnny Babich had pitched at each other.

The Yankees' leap was made possible by the Chicago White Sox dropping both ends of a doubleheader to the St. Louis Browns, 10-9 and 7-5. Both games were free-hitting affairs with the two teams rolling up 50 hits, including seven home runs, during the afternoon.

The Cincinnati Reds dropped a 5-2 decision to Pittsburgh, their first loss to the Pirates this year, and slumped substantially into second place in the National league.

The Chicago Cubs were shut out by the St. Louis Cardinals 5-0 on the four-hit hurling of Max Lanier.

The Brooklyn Dodgers cut down the Phillies 4-2 for their fifth consecutive victory and Freddy Fitzsimmons' fourth without defeat.

While most managers are loath to touch a winning combination, Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers carried out the best Brooklyn traditions by starting a new rightfielder, Jim Wasdell, who was batting .086 at the very bottom of the American league when acquired from Washington. Wasdell got two hits in four trips to show what the Brooklyn climate does to a fellow.

Plan to Organize New Softball Loop

Plans for organizing a new Friendly House baseball league will be discussed Friday at 7:30 at the settlement house, Mike Wentz, Friendly House athletic supervisor, announced today.

According to Wentz the new league will be composed of teams which are not already participating in the Friendly House Junior baseball book. The new league, when organized, will be called the Friendly House Knot-Hole Gang.

Boys of 15 or under are eligible to enter and those desiring to participate in the league are urged to be present at the meeting Friday, Wentz said. Managers especially are urged to attend.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE

INDIANAPOLIS — (U.P.) — The greatest driver of a racing car this country ever produced won't be behind a wheel when the field answers the starting bomb of the 28th annual 500-mile marathon here tomorrow.

He'll be in the safety of the pits, giving signals to a youngster who has yet to realize that every whir of the wheels, every screaming cry of the tires in a turn are notes in a symphony conducted by death.

The man I speak of it Louie Meyer, only three-time winner in the history of the Memorial day race. In 1928, in 1933, and again in 1936, Meyer was the first to get the checkered flag. I ran across him in gasoline alley, that row of sheds where the "hurry hearses" are readied for the drive around the bricks.

He was covered with grease, and carried an assortment of wrenches. Busy as he was, readying his car for the heavy-footed and daredevish Rex Mays to drive, he took time to explain why he wouldn't be on the starting line.

"Remember that smash-up I had last year?" he asked.

I did, because it provided one of those heart-stopping moments when it's touch and go between a driver and Gabriel with his horn. On a far turn Meyer's car went broadside, cut through a retaining wall, and started to burn. Fortunately it threw him out—on his feet—and he was able to dodge two on-thundering cars and reach safety.

"I've been in accidents before." Meyer explained, "but that was the first one I definitely knew was caused by me, and not by any fault in the machine. Right then, I knew it was time for me to quit. When I got an offer of a good job I didn't need any persuading to take it."

Meyer's remarks brought to mind a conversation I had with Billy Arnold some years ago. Arnold, a cherubic-faced little fellow with a heart of steel, won the race in 1930. In 1931 he went over the wall and barely escaped death. Undaunted, he came back the next year—and again he hurdled the wall. He quit racing right after that.

"I didn't mind the first jump over the wall," Arnold told me, "because an axle went bad and I couldn't help it. But the second time was my fault. I made an error in judgment, and so I quit."

* * *

That's the philosophy of the Indianapolis drivers. Nothing matters so long as the blame can be placed on the machine.

Indians Worried as Tigers Cop Second

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Under ordinary circumstances a two-game losing streak is no cause for anxiety in major league baseball.

But the Indians, who dropped their second straight to Detroit yesterday 8 to 5, are admittedly worried about their strikeouts and ineffective pitchers.

To remedy the hurling slump Manager Oscar Vitt nominated six-victory Bob Feller to face the Tigers in the series finale. Tom Seats, a rookie southpaw, was to work for the Bengals.

Four relief flingers followed Johnny Allen to the hill yesterday as the Tigers drew within a game and a half of the second-place Redskins, who now trail Boston by two games.

Bill Zuber was charged with the defeat. The other pitchers were Johnny Humphries, Joe Dobson and Mike Naymick.

Cleveland scored four runs in the third on two walks, Lou Boudreau's single, Jeff Heath's double and Ken Keltner's triple. At this point Al Benton took over the hurling chore and limited the Tribe to six hits the rest of the route. The Indians pushed their other score over in the sixth on a walk, Ray Mack's single and two infield outs.

* * *

The Redskins play Chicago in a holiday doubleheader here tomorrow and then open another eastern invasion.

Reds Call on Bucky Walters

Cincinnati Ace to Face Pirates In Final Encounter.

(By Associated Press)

PITTSBURGH — The Cincinnati Reds called on Bucky Walters for mound duty in the final encounter of a series with the Pirates today, after stubbing their toes in the midst of a tooth and nail battle with Brooklyn for the league lead.

Walters, who has won seven straight games, will oppose Joe Bowman, with a two and two record.

A 5-2 Pittsburgh decision drove the Reds back to a half length behind the Dodgers yesterday as the Flatbush gang gleefully trounced the Phillies.

In their first triumph over Cincinnati this year, the Bucs got six hits off Junior Thompson and two off Johnny Hutchings, who relieved him in the sixth.

The Pirates scored a run in the second, three in the fourth and a final marker in the eighth inning.

Arky Vaughan started the Pittsburgh push by scoring in the first when Johnny Rizzo made a poor throw to the plate on Maurice Van Robay's fly.

Max Butcher held the Reds to five hits but Bill Werber managed to score two runs—the only two for Cincinnati. He doubled in the fourth, Frank McCormick walked and Ernie Lombardi bounced into a double play. Werber went to third and crossed the plate on a single by Harry Craft.

He blasted out a homer in the eighth.

Canton Clings to Slim League Lead

YOUNGSTOWN — (AP) — Canton clung to a slim lead in the Mid-Atlantic league today after a 9 to 6 setback by the Youngstown Browns. The idle Portsmouth Redbirds edged within a half-game of first place.

Pitcher Russell Olsen held the Terriers well in check except in the eighth inning when they bunched half of their eight hits for a four-run rally. Two walks, three errors and a wild pitch gave the Browns three runs in the first frame.

In his Akron debut, Carl Drew pitched the Yankees to an 8 to 1 victory over the Charleston Senators. Charleston's 10 hits were well scattered. Portsmouth and Dayton were rained out.

URGES CO-OPERATION IN THE EDUCATION OF HANDICAPPED

State co-operation with cities and school districts in providing special education for handicapped children was the subject on which Mrs. Hazel C. McIntire, of Columbus, state director of special education, spoke at Tuesday's joint meeting of Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, held at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Increasing enrollment of pupils requiring special education because of physical or mental handicaps, was disclosed by Mrs. McIntire, who told of the inadequacy of state funds to meet obligations incurred in many cities.

Crippled children, and those with only partial vision or defective hearing are those most greatly in need of education fitted to their individual cases, so that, insofar as possible, they can be made self-sustaining instead of continuing through life as dependents.

"The question is sometimes asked," said Mrs. McIntire, "can the state and the taxpayers afford to maintain facilities for special education of handicapped children? What should really be considered is whether we can afford NOT to give them the kind of education that will meet their requirements, and to remedy the physical defects whenever possible."

A graph was shown to emphasize the shortage of funds for special education and the rapid gains in enrollment of children who should be given special teaching.

William C. Mead, member of the board of directors of the Ohio Society for Crippled Children, was program chairman of the meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Harry V. Downs, superintendent and matron of the Richland county children's home, and members of the board of trustees of the home, were guests at the meeting.

Lots For Sale

Homesites For Sale

The first step to owning your own home and stop paying rent is to purchase a lot, so that it will not be a financial burden to build your home. That lot should be improved, all improvements such as water, gas, electricity and street improvement should be in and paid for—building restrictions should be imposed and allotment should be approved FHA. That is the case in Country Club Addition. The first cost is the only cost. Lots are priced below improvement costs, $100 to $350 with payments as low as $5 monthly. Drive out and see for yourself. STOCKS WORK UPWARD UNDER FIRM MARKET

Bonds, Commodities, Steels Showing General Improvement.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Stocks worked into higher ground today under the impetus of small but steady buying.

Chief factor in the rise, said commentators, was a development of confidence in the market by its comparative firmness yesterday in the face of the Belgian surrender.

On the upside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Woolworth, Sperry, Douglas, Du Pont, Westinghouse, Kennecott and American Telephone.

Bonds and commodities were generally improved.

Domestic business news noted included: Highest electric power production for the year last week; estimated largest number of freight carloadings for the year, 685,000, last week; U. S. Steel Corp., production estimated five to six points higher than the industry-wide rate of 76.9 per cent of capacity this week.

Three units of the parade will form on Park avenue west between Mulberry street and the American Legion home. In the column will be city officials and police, the Memorial Day staff of officers, all veterans of American wars, Gold Star mothers, and contingents of patriotic organizations; Battery D, Boy and Girl Scouts, and three bands, the Legion Drum Corps, the Senior High school band and the Gfrer Concert band.

The parade will move east on Park avenue at 1:30 to Main street, south on Main to Chestnut and east on Chestnut to the cemetery, led by Capt. R. J. Nichols, ranking officer of Battery D and First Grand Marshal T. M. Bell, and Walter Hill, Second Grand Marshal.

county, called for harmony in the party and urged the county organization to "back the entire Democratic ticket."

Party leaders saw in the re-election of Baer by a big margin the possibility that Atty. John C. O'Donnell will be retained as county executive chairman.

Atty. O'Donnell indicated previously that he would not have the time to give to the chairman's post in a campaign year, but he is popular in the party and party leaders predicted today that he can be chairman again if he wants the job.

Baer, who is also a delegate from the 17th district to the Democratic national convention in Chicago this summer, was elected for two years as chairman. It will be his third term and second consecutive two-year term. Since he entered politics a half century ago he has also headed the county executive committee for seven years.

The majority of the 91 members of the executive committee were re-elected last night and the committee was authorized to fill vacancies in the group.

Since a number of the central committeemen were absent and each member must choose an executive committee is completed. No to be several days before the executive committee is completed. No date was set for its organization meeting.

Unlike the Republican executive committee which has only 31 members, the Democratic committee has a representative from each of the 92 precincts in the county. The central committeeman may name himself or some one else in his precinct as executive committeeman.

The central committeemen in Shelby were authorized to appoint a member to fill a vacancy in the Third ward, precinct B, where none was elected at the May 14 primary.

On a motion submitted by John Correll, the central committee last night voted to draw up resolutions in tribute to Philip Smith, city councilman, who was killed May 15.

FDR Intervention Points to Roosevelt-Garner Ticket

PRESIDENT AIDS TEXAS FAVORITE SON

Restores Harmony to Assembly After Session of Clashes And Fist Fights.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt's intervention to insure a Texas "favorite son" delegation for Vice President John N. Garner aroused belief today that the Democratic ticket in 1940 will again be "Roosevelt and Garner."

With the president considered certain of renomination and a real contest developing behind the scenes for the post of his running mate, Democratic leaders see the Texas outcome as pointing the way to a Roosevelt-Garner ticket. Advocates of this ticket say that the president went out of his way to put over a harmony program in Texas, where the Democratic convention endorsed Garner for the presidency on a favorite son basis and praised Roosevelt's administration.

This outcome was hailed as terminating what had grown into a third term feud between the president and Garner. Some Garnerites intimate that the Texan, previously opposed to a third term, is now willing to take second place on such a ticket, because of the extraordinary international situation. Others, however insist that Garner is still opposed to a third term and will speak his mind at what he considers the right time.

The president, meanwhile, has given no inkling of his favorite for a runningmate, in event that he seeks a third term. His silence has aroused hopes in many breasts.

There are distinct under-cover campaigns being conducted to gain this post for Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (Mont.), Speaker William H. Bankhead (Ala.), Rep Martin Dies (Tex.), and Sen. Scott Lucas (Ill.),

The Garner talk, however, overshadowed the rest, as a result of the Texas convention outcome. The harmony program prevailed there, after many fist fights and after a third term bolt was defeated overwhelmingly. The third termers found the president's own spokesman — Under-Secretary of the Interior Alvin Wirtz—opposed to them and in favor of the Garner harmony program.

The president incidentally can well afford to give thought to a runningmate. As of today, he has 767 delegates pledged to him out of a total of 1,094, with more in the offing. To date only 127 delegates have been pledged outright to other candidates, although a number more would go to favorite sons if Mr. Roosevelt were not a candidate.

WACO, Texas—(INS)—Texas' 46 votes to the Democratic national convention were pledged today to Vice President John Nance Garner following a hectic state assembly marked by fist fights and angry booing.

One of the scuffles was between Mayor Maury Maverick of San Antonio, ardent third term advocate, and Mayor Tom Miller of Austin, keynote speaker of the assembly. Loud boos greeted introduction of Miller by Elliott Roosevelt, son of the president.

Meanwhile, in state convention at Dallas, Texas Republicans voted to send an uninstructed delegation to the G. O. P. national convention. The delegation has 26 votes.

Circus Sets Up Big Top, Gives Two Performances

Without the customary sunshine and warmth of "circus day," the Lewis Brothers Three Ring circus moved into Mansfield today for two performances, setting up the big top on a ground plot opposite the Mansfield Armory on Ashland road.

But there were the colored balloons, red lemonade, flags fluttering from the main tent and the ballyhoo of the side shows to convince small boys and girls that it really is circus day.

Lewis Brothers carry a large herd of trained horses and ponies seen in military drills and feats of precision, with Bert Wallace, famous trainer, featured.

The youngsters will be delighted with the trained dogs. The company carries 20 chows and spitz dogs said to do some remarkable stunts. In the animal contingent there is a baby elephant, four and a half feet high, which has learned already to do tricks under the direction of Capt. Lee English.

Other stellar attractions with the circus are aerial acts, contortionists, slow-motion acrobats and of course the "man on the flying trapese."

The first performance started at 2 p. m. and the evening show is scheduled for 8 p. m.

Question 2 Suspects In $30,000 Robbery

Up and Down THE STREET

History frequently repeats itself, but sometimes it does it in reverse, according to Ralph Hughes, clerk of municipal court. Hughes has two pictures of war maps which he is carrying around in his billfold. One he clipped from the newspaper this week, and it shows the cities of Belgium and France that are beleagured by the German forces and which are being held in the "pincers" of German military power. The other map is 21 years old and Hughes cut it out of the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune on Oct. 7, 1918. Around those very same Belgium and French towns is shown a huge pair of pincers, but that time it was the Allied forces that were putting the "squeeze" on the retreating and dispairing German army. Hughes was with the 174th air squadron.

A four-month old baby treated at the General hospital last night was the innocent victim of a family argument, police reports disclosed today. According to police, the child suffered head lacerations when the father, separated from its mother, hurled a brick through the door window when she refused a reconcilation, pieces of the glass striking the baby. The man was not arrested.

Two 16-year-old youths who live east of Mansfield threatened last night to "leave home and never come back" and today they had made good at least a part of their threat. The boys went to the lawn fete at the Madison township school and failed to return, their parents reported. Authorities had found no trace of them several hours after the boys were reported missing. One of the youths, Paul Brumenschenkel, is five feet and 11 inches tall and the other, Jack Fletcher, is five feet, nine inches tall. They were dressed in work clothes.

CLOUDY, COOL

Memorial Day Picnickers Had Better Prepare to Duck.

Parties planning Memorial day picnics and outings are advised to keep them to the front porch or back yard where a quick dash can be made to shelter when those predicted "light showers" strike.

Another cloudy, cool day is forecast for tomorrow, with showers and little change in temperature.

There has been little variation in the temperature for the past few days. The thermometer goes down to the low 40's during the night and crawls back up to the middle 60's during the day.

Yesterday's high was 65 and today at noon it was 62. The average for the past week has been about six below the average of the past 15 years.

'FINAL' ACTION ON W. 4TH DUE

Council Meets Again Tonight To O. K. Last Legislation On Paving Project.

City council will meet in special session tonight, for the third time within a week, on the call of Mayor William J. Locke to approve legislation dealing with the proposed improvement of West Fourth street.

The meeting was called by Locke after the state had submitted a final resolution which it asked council to approve in order that it might proceed with the work. It will be the last legislative action that council will be called upon to complete the project.

The legislation was submitted to city officials Monday by the state. Approval will set in motion the machinery to start the project which has already been advertised for contract bids by the highway department.

The improvement, to be done under contract with WPA labor calls for repaving 7,660 feet of the street from North Diamond street to a point just east of Ausdale avenue. The job is expected to be completed in three months.

Following the session, council's finance committee will meet with South Boulevards and Madison township officials to negotiate separate contracts with both communities for fire protection by the Mansfield fire department.

At the same time, a special council committee, headed by Russell Porch, which has under consideration a proposal for a municipal building code will meet with Trades council officials, sponsors of the move, to talk over the plan.

WILLKIE URGES ASSISTANCE TO ALLIES, WOULD SEND INQUIRY

AKRON—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie believes the United States should ask warring European democracies what help they need.

Willkie, utilities magnate and a "dark horse" Republican presidential possibility, said at an American Legion banquet last night:

"I should like to ask Secretary of State Hull to ask the democracies publicly and in the name of the American people what help short of troops the American people can give.

"It is clear that England and France constitute our first line of defense. But we can dismiss any thought of going over ourselves to save them. We have no troops and if we had troops we would lack equipment.

"If the Allies respond to our query with a request, we can debate it on its merits. Even if we cannot grant it our inquiry will help allied morale and will have helped a little to check Hitler."

President of Commonwealth and Southern Corp., the former Akronite called on the New Dealers and "trouble makers" in Washington to put an end to discord and bring together the industrial brains, labor and young men and women in an effort for national unity.

Willkie said he would confer with Alf Landon, 1936 Republican presidential candidate, at Topeka, Kas., tomorrow. He said he had been invited by Landon, but did not know what course the conference would take.

POLICE ARREST PAIR, RECOVER STOLEN MONEY

Garage Attendant Discovers Currency on Car Floor; Gun Cache Found.

(By United Press)

CINCINNATI — Two men, one who gave a Columbus address and one who gave a Marion, O., address were being questioned by police as suspects in the $30,000 holdup of the Avondale branch of the Central Trust company.

Police said all of the stolen money had been recovered.

The suspects, registered as Elmer Whitt, 30, Columbus, and Ivan Phillips, 35, Marion, were taken into custody in a garage last night less than four hours after the swift robbery of the bank.

Neither of the men would answer questions at first but police said they had been identified as the bandits by three persons who were in the bank.

Police said Whitt and Phillips were arrested on a tip from an alert garage attendant who became suspicious when he saw $2,000 in currency on the floor of an automobile the men had left with him with instructions to "gas it and grease it."

Frank Nickels, the garageman, summoned police and a heavily-armed squad of detectives and police were on hand to arrest the men without resistance when they returned for the car.

An automobile identified as the "getaway" car after the holdup was found abandoned an hour later, three blocks from the bank. Police believed the car in the garage was to have been used for the final escape.

It was believed at first that a third man participated in the holdup by acting as lookout and chauffer of the "getaway" car. Police said, however, that one of the men under arrest claimed there was no third man with them.

In Columbus, police raided the home address given by Whitt and found a cache of guns which were turned over to the federal bureau of investigation. The weapons included a shotgun, three rifles and several pistols, authorities said.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Betty Brewer, 13, here nominated as your new screen sweetheart, is a little girl with a turned-up nose, a thin face, deep brown eyes. She's thin, and not pretty, but has more determination than Joan Crawford, who has more than anybody else I know.

You won't believe Betty's story. It's incredible. I believe it because I sat next to her at lunch (she didn't touch her lunch because she'd rather talk than eat), and she told me about it. You have to believe Betty Brewer, if you believe anything.

She, her mother, dad and sister Ilene, 11, and brother Monte (or Sonny), 8, came here a couple of years ago from Joplin, Mo., to visit an ailing grandmother. Dad was a carpenter, but he couldn't get much work. The two girls (Ilene is Betty's stand-in) took up singing after listening to the radio convinced them they couldn't do any worse.

But let Betty carry on the recital:

"We got an audition at a radio station, and we got a job. We made our own arrangements, and one day we were going to sing 'Oh, Johnny' and the accompanist started off his way while we sang our way so we got fired. We made a little money by singing at gas company dinners, and electric light company dinners, and banquets for (then) Governor Merriam, and we did benefits whenever we could. We took a bus to San Francisco—mother went along—and up there we won an amateur night with a $17 prize. Didn't do much good because we had to work four days for the prize. . . .

"Back here we couldn't get anything else to do so we took up singing on the sidewalks outside the Beachcombers (cafe). I'm not ashamed of it—it's honest and we made enough that way to feed us all. All the movie stars were nice to us. . . . We did it for six months. . . . Lots of people said they'd give us a chance in pictures, but most of 'em just forgot, I s'pose. . . . We got a bit in a Warner short, and lots of interviews, and a singing bit in a Gene Autry picture and finally we met Mr. (Sam) Wood, and I had a feeling this was going to be it because I'd had a dream about it—you believe in dreams, don't you?' . . ."

Well, to cut it short, that was "it." Sam Wood is directing Betty is what amounts to the lead role opposite Fred MacMurray in "Rangers of Fortune." Wood says he'll shoot the first drama coach who gets near Betty—that she's just right as she is.

Betty giggles about her appearance on the screen. "I look like Pinocchio," she says. Ilene giggles at lot, too, like any little girl. When you ask Betty whether she plans to be a glamour girl, she says, "Look at my face! How could I?"

So Sonny is in school, and Betty is on the high road, and Ilene is making a regular salary as a stand-in, and Dad has had some work, though Betty wasn't sure it would last. It looks like a happy Cinderella ending to a tale of woes bravely met.

"I'd do it all over again, and I wouldn't mind, if I had to," said Betty.

ASHLAND MAN HURT BY BLAST

William Emerson Critically Injured as Metal Drum Explodes.

ASHLAND—William Emerson, 32, of 815 Orange street, is in Samaritan hospital here in a critical condition as the result of injuries suffered yesterday afternoon in an explosion at the William Ekey garage where he is employed.

Emerson was struck in the face with the top of a metal drum he was attemping to remove by using an acetylene torch. Dr. H. M. Dunn said he suffered a fractured skull, cuts about the left eye, lower lip, left cheek, and the loss of several teeth.

The drum was empty, but had contained an anti-freeze solution. He had barely touched the flame to the head of the drum when it blew off and struck him in the face, Ekey said.

Ask U. S. to Use City's Airport for Pilot Training

CIVIC GROUPS BACK PROJECT, START DRIVE

Request Government to Pick Port Here, Furnish Planes And Instructors.

A campaign was underway today to have the war department set up an aviation training center at Mansfield airport, furnishing instructors and planes.

Pushing the project are R. B. Gardner, state commander of the American Legion and reserve officer in the air corps, and James R. Harrington, airport manager and a pioneer in developing aviation in Mansfield.

Letters were written today by the Chamber of Commerce and Mayor W. J. Locke to aviation heads and congressional representatives in Washington. Gardner talked to army officials in Washington yesterday, urging support for the plan.

Gardner said today that while tentative plans for training pilots called for only one training center in each army area—which would mean one somewhere in the Fifth Corps Area made up of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia—that army men were of the opinion that a number would be set up in each area.

Both Gardner and Harrington are pointing out the advantage of the Mansfield airport, large enough for training purposes and one of the few good ones not congested with commercial air traffic.

John G. Routzon, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said that a letter had been directed to Earl L. Johnson, director of the state aeronautical department, asking co-operation in establishing a government training center here. Locke said he had written Senator Robert Taft and Congressman J. Harry McGregor, asking their support.

Unofficial applications of training in the air corps may be made now by addressing "Aviation Plattsburg," care of James R. Harrington, 111 Davis road, Mansfield. Applications should state experience, education and physical condition of the men.

ITALY LINGERS ON BRINK OF 'EMPIRE' WAR

Operations Expected In Area Around Mediterranean Since Belgian Surrender.

(By Associated Press)

ROME—Italy lingered tonight on the brink of war which many foreign and Italian observers expect Italy to start, possibly within the next few days, but in north Africa and the Mediterranean rather than against France directly.

This view was supported by Nicola Marchitti in a semi-monthly political review entitled "The Conquest of Empire."

He asserted Italy's "offensive objectives" would be actions by the navy and warplanes in the Mediterranean, land war in Africa to conquer the Suez Canal and eventually in the Balkans to protect Italian interests.

Italian strategy, he wrote, is defensive on both the French and Tunisian (French North African) frontiers, but of a different character on the Egyptian border.

The surrender of the Belgian army on the western front appeared today to have ended any chance the Allies may have had to keep Italy out of the war by relaxing their blockade restrictions.

Italy's war fervor heightened with the Belgian collapse, and active Italian intervention in the conflict seemed to many to be but a question of days.

Civilians began today to take over some of the posts left vacant by men called to arms and the government prepared to make many other such replacements in case a civil mobilization is put into effect.

A million and a half volunteers—women and minors enlisted through the Fascist party—are prepared to take over special jobs at a moment's notice. Many will be employed in the industries and agriculture to replace soldiers.

With the Belgian capitulation, the minds of Italy's leaders seemed to be made up regarding their course in the war.

The newspaper La Tribuna headlined a Paris story in this fashion: "Paris deceiving itself that situation may be repaired by dropping blockade policy."

This newspaper wrote scornfully of the chances of such an attempt being successful "with or without indemnity for the damage already suffered."

The decapitated body of Gansburger was found shortly before 6:30 p. m. yesterday by W. E. Hess, 27 North Adams street, a brakeman, while a train crew was shifting cars in the Brass company area.

Dr. Hugh C. Winbigler, county coroner, said Gansburger had been decapitated by a wheel of a moving car. His body also bore lacerations and bruises and several ribs were fractured. He returned a verdict of accidental death.

Police said their investigation indicated that Gansburger had been killed about 5:20 p. m. and had been dead an hour when his body was discovered. Railroad employes said several cars had been shifted over the tracks about that time.

Born in Austria-Hungary, Mr. Gansburger came to Mansfield a number of years ago. He had worked at the Humphryes Manufacturing company for the past 22 years.

Besides his widow, Mary, he is survived by two sons, George and Joseph, both of Mansfield and a daughter, Mary, of San Francisco, Calif. The body was removed to the Geiger funeral home. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Pledge of Allegiance To Flag.

"I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

As Graduates Look Ahead

YOUNG men and women who are being graduated from high schools and colleges this spring will probably benefit by taking a look backward, as well as forward, at this particular time—so as not to become jittery over dire predictions based on present conditions in Europe and what many people regard as imminent danger to the future of America.

Except for occasional lulls in the fighting, the world has been a battleground almost continuously for many centuries and will probably continue so for a long time to come—or until the level of civilization is raised to the point of removing the elemental causes of war.

The manner in which the present war was brought upon millions of peace-loving people in small nations of Europe gives an idea of the futility of individual efforts to prevent such a catastrophe, and the present wave of rearmament sentiment in the United States evidences the quick change that can come about in mass thinking when an emergency arises.

It would seem advisable, therefore, for the youthful graduate to at least temporarily accept world and national conditions as they are, and adjust himself to them, rather than to adopt an attitude of hopeless resignation or attempt to make over the world or the nation in short order.

It will be far more practical, in looking to their own future, if young graduates will learn the rules of success and failure, as they have been formulated from many generations of experience, and prepare to do some particular kind of necessary work in a capable and dependable way.

It may encourage some young men and women to learn that speakers at a recent forum meeting of college students in New York City declared that research and technological progress will not only eventually provide good employment for all who are able to work, but that actually there will be a shortage of labor. Speakers included Charles F. Kettering and Alfred P. Sloan, executives in the General Motors organization, and well qualified to envision future opportunities on the basis of past accomplishments and present conditions.

Let Processes Be Orderly

WHATEVER tolerance may have heretofore marked the attitude of Americans toward subversive activities carried on in the United States by European "ism" groups, present conditions warrant stern suppression of such movements and immediate action to rid this country of alien agitators who recognize allegiance to any foreign power.

Steps along this line have already been taken by the department of justice and the FBI, working in co-operation with the Dies committee in its disclosures of un-American organizations having for their purpose the overthrow of government in this country.

Senate approval of a law barring Communists and Nazi bund members from jobs in interstate commerce and warnings against the danger of sabotage in industries given over to manufacture of war materials, indicates increasing realization of the importance of putting a restraining hand on "fifth column" activities in the United States.

But as this is going on it is also important to avoid extreme measures and refrain from idle gossip which might tend to cast suspicion on innocent persons—as was sometimes done during the excitement of the World war.

It has been asked that names of suspected persons be given to a representative of the FBI for investigation, rather than to any local vigilante committee.

This is a time for calm, clear thinking about what is going on in the world and considering America's best course under existing conditions—thus gaining a clearer conception of true democracy, what it means, and what it requires of those who profess it.

Read the Constitution. Read American history. Read the works of great Americans, especially Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln. Then you will know what is wrong with the dictatorships, and with people here or anywhere who believe in that way of life.

Refugees and Short Rations

RED CROSS officials estimate the number of refugees in France today as close to 5,000,000. The new throngs of terrified and homeless persons, fleeing before the storm of the most terrible war their world has known, have created a critical situation. France is fighting for its life and straining every resource to do so. It has enough food for normal purposes, but it does not have enough to meet the combined needs of soldiers, civilians and refugees.

The Red Cross is tackling this great task with the aid of the American people. The work will not end with the gifts of money, clothing and food we send, but must be carried on with all sorts of services to shelter, comfort and reunite scattered families. New homes must be found for some, back in their homelands after the war, or in new places. Old homes must be restored.

The need seems staggering, but no one doubts that it will be handled with skill, sympathy, intelligence, and a minimum of mistakes. Even as mankind makes war on itself, it proves its ability to rebuild and to rise above war.

Crude Oil as Rubber Supply

DR. GUSTAVE EGLOFF, Chicago petroleum scientist, says we can make all the rubber we need from crude oil. The potential supply from this source, he adds, reckoning only our own oil wells, would be 200 times as much as all the natural rubber used last year.

And we wouldn't have to wait ten years, as we would if we started planting rubber trees in tropical South America, which some American manufacturers have been doing. There are synthetic rubber processes already operating in this country, yielding raw materials for rubber. Our oil industry, Dr. Egloff adds, could not only provide all the rubber we need, after a suitable period of development, but could produce from our own oil "any conceivable amount" of basic materials for high explosives. And there would still be plenty of gasoline left for transportation motors.

After looking around, Jack Warwick, Toledo Blade paragrapher, decides: "There are not many wise men in a crowd."

Silence seldom stirs up strife, but a loose tongue leads the way to trouble.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—This room, which is a news room and which therefore is a repository for most of the world's ills just now, looks out upon one of the most cheerful sights in New York. It is the Rockefeller skating arena which is a sort of public hanging gardens surrounded by brightly canopied sidewalk cafes, flaming forsythia hedges and tulip beds. From these windows the scene embraces green sodded terraces and tumbling fountains, a glazed marble rectangle which is the surface of the arena itself, and throngs of passers-by who jam the sidewalks from early morning until long after nightfall.

The skaters themselves are of all ages and of all degrees of proficiency, although a majority of them are young girls with eager, provocative eyes and boys with mercury in their feet who put on astonishing if unprogrammed exhibitions of skill.

SOMETIMES the skaters dance to fox-trots and waltzes piped in through amplifier and loudspeakers, and it is then that the scene is reminiscent of old, bygone Vienna beer gardens, except there is no brass band in evidence and the spic young officers whose boots shone like glass are represented by attendants in blue uniforms who are there to comfort those who have spills and in general take care of those who need care.

When you gaze upon this scene through the windows of this office you are given the impression of a modern motion picture for which there is no sound. All the action is etched in silence. The high, heavy panes and the clattering teletype printers take care of that. The windows are four stories above 50th street, and the teletype printers are bringing in the dispatches and communiques from the front. To step to the windows and gaze upon this scene after hours of politics, war and crime is like bathing one's hands in cool, clear water.

HERE in Manhattan one is constantly reminded that human experiences run in cycles. Twenty-four years ago a 16-year-old girl, a refugee from Belgium, was lecturing in key cities on the tragic dilemma any nation faces when it is invaded. This girl had been in hospitals with Nurse Edith Cavell, whom the Germans executed as a spy. Most of her family were prisoners. One of her brothers was in the Belgian army. She came here at the behest of the Belgian government to explain Belgium's illiad to American audiences.

She is Suzanne Silvercruys, and today she is a famous woman sculptor. She is an American citizen, and married to Edward Ford Stevenson of New York. Her brother is Baron Silvercruys of the Belgian diplomatic service. She has studios overlooking the tall trees and the landscaped acres of Central Park.

But her studios are silent and the clay and the chisels lie untouched. Most of her time now is spent, as it was 24 years ago, in organizing women's committees for Belgium civilian relief. She has opened offices in the International Building. Twenty-four years. "To me," says Miss Silvercruys, "it seems only yesterday."

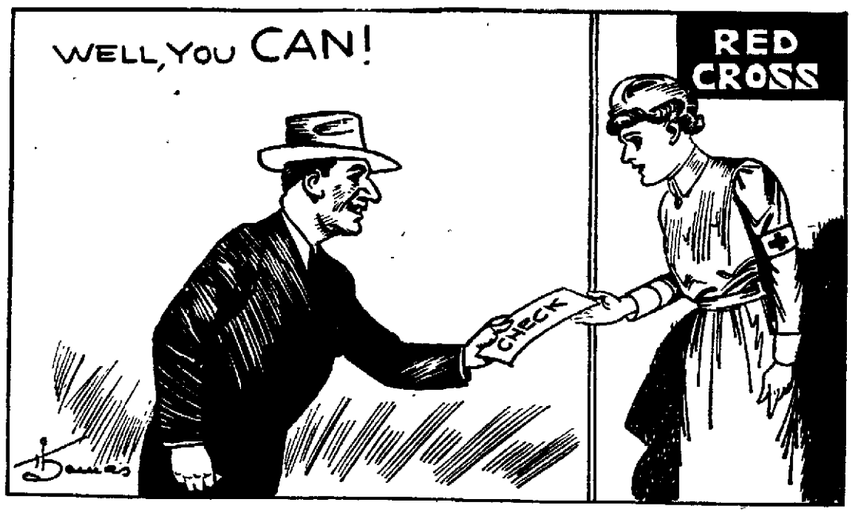
FOR THAT HELPLESS FEELING



Scan Brazil's Rubber Resources

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Rubber from Brazil has become a much livelier topic of interest in the administration since the possibility not only that the Allies might lose the war, but that the Dutch East Indies might eventually fall into other hands.

Of course, after the war is over, this country could always buy rubber from the islands which are now the Dutch East Indies. Even if they belong to Germany, or for that matter Japan—though Cordell Hull has certainly put his foot down on any change in their national status. But as officials here contemplate the various possibilities of a world with no British Empire, and particularly a world with no friendly British fleet, the possibilities change considerably.

There would be no assurance in any future war that this country could maintain trade routes to the Dutch East Indies, even if it had its own shipping. It is still the notion, despite various alarmist predictions as to what the Nazis would do in South America, that this country could depend on a supply of rubber or anything else it might wish to buy from Brazil.

THIS view is held notwithstanding the fact that there are more rumors about a Nazi-inspired revolution in Brazil than any other country included in the Pan American Union.

But that is only one side of the picture. The other has been growing in importance since the war in Europe cut off German exports to South America. British and French exporters are able to sell South America all they can produce, but our exporters, while the South Americans are eager to buy, find difficulty in getting payment.

The answer, of course, is that outside of coffee from Brazil, and a few other things, this country does not want to buy many South American products. The classic example is the Argentine Republic, whose two chief exports, meat and grain, are in competition with our surpluses.

Brazil's chief crops are coffee and cotton now. At present we can take a lot of coffee, but we always did. That does not boost the amount of exchange at Brazil's disposal, and hence does not increase her capacity to buy from the United States, much as she wants to buy automobiles and all sorts of manufactured goods from us.

SOME time back Henry Ford started a rubber plantation in Brazil. It comprises 20,000 acres, and is expected to begin actual commercial production next year, or 1942 at the latest. It takes quite a time to bring a rubber plantation into production.

Brazil's rubber tragedy is rather curious. Actually she was the original rubber country. It was wild rubber. Trees from Brazil were taken to the Far East, and caused most of the commercial production in that part of the world. But Brazil never seriously developed the industry. It was the difference between wild blackberries growing along the road, which so many of us picked as children, and cultivated berries grown for the market.

This government is interested in encouraging Brazil to take up rubber production in a really big way. There is hardly any limit to the demand, and it is a demand, as Brazil has learned to her sorrow, which expands rather than contracts when war breaks out. War needs for rubber are prodigious. But a nation can be compelled by an exchange-minded government to do without coffee. Not only are the Germans, who are naturally great coffee drinkers, doing without the real thing, but so are the Italians, who are not at war but who are driven to guard against unnecessary imports.

In short coffee, whatever the Americans may think about it, is a luxury. Rubber is a necessity.

Listen, World!

They've Reckoned Without the Mothers.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

AS A WAR COMMENTATOR or Military Tactician I'm probably just a good cake cook. But, still, I have a hunch that the War Lords have made a mistake in this Word war No. 2, which is going to upset all their apple carts and make monkeys of their "mechanized maneuvers."

I think they're reckoning without the Mothers.

Since history began, Mothers have been the Base of Supplies. Human supplies. Human bodies, to be burned or broken on the field of battle. Which was probably plenty tough on the Mothers who bore them. But, regardless of how they wailed or wept, they could do nothing about it. Mothers had to accept what was handed them, in those days. They had no alternative. The government ruled their husbands, and their husbands ruled them. They had no voice in their own or their sons' destinies.

So thousands of years rolled by, with Mothers bearing sons, only to see those sons killed. While the helpless Mothers wrung their hands and broke their hearts behind the kitchen walls.

Then along came Messrs. Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini with new ideas about women. Women, they said, should not be confined to kitchens. They should have a part in public service. They should take their places, as men did, in factories, in transportation work, in co-operative farming.

So the Mothers, and prospective Mothers, of these nations left the kitchens. Left their dumb bondage and inarticulate grief and went into public places. And began mingling. And began thinking. And began talking. And began being Wised Up.

For when women go free, they inevitably start to think. They become articulate. They refuse to accept the Status Quo without question. They begin to wonder . . . and doubt . . . and rebel. They begin to remember their slaughtered boys . . . or the boys who are doomed to be slaughtered. They begin to ask why this should be. They begin to say, "THIS SHALL NOT BE!" Then there's the deuce to pay!

This has happened to the women of Russia and of Italy—and America. It is happening to the women of Germany. It has happened wherever and whenever women have been freed to think their own thoughts and draw their own conclusions. And already the results are showing.

The women of Russia bitterly resented the massacre in Finland. They were not impressed by political ultimatums or military reassurances. They only knew their husbands, sweethearts and sons were dead. And, with the single-minded stubbornness of women, they refused to see why it was necessary for them to die.

This has happened to the women of Russia since they learned how to think . . . and wonder . . . and talk. It is happening, today, to the women of Italy. For the Italian mothers and girls were also taken from their kitchens, put into public service. And thereby, unwittingly, freed from their ancient fears.

The Dictators are smart. The Dictators are efficient. But there is, I think, a flaw in their efficiency. To serve their own greed, they freed the Mothers. And now they are reckoning without the terrible anger and fighting will of those Mothers.

IT WILL BE THE MOTHERS, IN THE END, WHO WILL OUTLAW WAR . . . WHO WILL FORCE PEACE . . . WHO WILL DEFEAT GERMANY.

Nineteen Billions for What?

The great American gold cemetery at Fort Knox now contains a 19 billion dollar hoard. There is no prospect that it will be less so long as the ports are open and the federal law is as it is. While the flow of this monetary metal to our shores has been steady, none of the economic benefits predicted for it has appeared. No suggestions have been heard for sound business-like use of the Midas store.

While it is impossible to have the benefits of the New Deal gold policy discerned, the dangers are obvious to all. Every time the control of the totalitarian government is extended to new territory, that much area is cut off from American trade. The totalitarians use little gold. They strive for self sufficiency and trade by barter. If Europe should become totalitarian, what would the United States do with all the gold?

If the use of monetary gold should cease in the world, as is quite probable, how could the Fort Knox folly be liquidated?—Toledo Blade.

Ohio Anecdotes

Constitution Signer.

JONATHAN DAYTON was the youngest member of the Federal Constitutional convention—only 27 years old—and throughout the convention sat beside the oldest member of the ratifying body, Benjamin Franklin.

Dayton, for whom the city of Dayton was named, held title to 250,000 acres between the Big and Little Miami rivers.

He favored the purchase of the Louisiana Territory in 1803, was active in the development of the west, and was interested in the projected canal around the falls of the Ohio river.

Dayton was a friend of Aaron Burr, and would have joined Burr in his nefarious empire-building scheme but for ill health. Even though he did not actually join the plot, Dayton was indicted for high treason in 1807, but the charge was later withdrawn. The incident ended his political career.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The French have been too proud to let the public know it, but they have been almost down on their knees before U. S. officials to beg, borrow, or buy more airplanes.

The French aviation situation is desperate. How many planes have been smashed is not definitely known—perhaps not even by the French themselves. But most of their air force on the western front has been put out of business. It is estimated that at least an equal number of Nazi planes have also crashed, but Germany started with about 18,000 planes, the French with about 2,000.

One big handicap to the French is that they were counting upon British air support. The original tactics were for the French to do the bulk of the land fighting, with the British reinforcing in the air. But this was before anyone realized that Hitler was going to break through the French lines and head straight for the channel.

Now Britain needs every plane she has for the home defense.

So desperate was the French plight that they wanted to buy any kind of plane, even those considered too old for the U. S. army. The war department estimates it has more than 1,500 out of date planes. However, the secretary of war issued an order no later than March 14 prohibiting the sale of surplus army material even to third parties who might conceivably resell them to France and England.

Latest Plane Purchases.

MEANWHILE the delivery of airplanes already ordered by the French and British proceeds with tragic slowness. Here are the inside figures, illustrating how long it may take the United States to turn out 50,000 planes for itself:

Through May 22 the Allies had ordered 7,588 airplanes, of which only 1,888 had been delivered.

Of the 20,820 motors ordered, only 4,022 had been delivered.

This includes planes ordered only after the war started, and the fact is that France was much more far-sighted than England and began ordering planes on the American market long before war broke. It was a French pilot, killed in San Diego, that caused such a furore in the senate over U. S. planes being sold to a foreign country. (Now there is no furore.)

Inside fact is that the British have been woefully inefficient in their plane purchases. When the last British purchasing mission arrived just a few weeks ago, their original instructions were to order 10,000 planes.

But suddenly they got cabled instructions from London to cut the purchase to 4,600. Sir John Simon had changed his mind. Reason for the change is not known, for it came just as the Allies were in a bad spot in Norway. Also it came just before the resignation of the Chamberlain cabinet, and illustrates how much backing and filling there was inside the Chamberlain government.

British Middlemen.

ALL the inside reports received by the U. S. war and navy departments indicate that one of the chief British weaknesses is inability to co-ordinate their production and buying. For instance, the British purchasing mission in Washington has been ready to buy machine tools for the manufacture of munitions in England. But they have not yet received definite specifications from London. So several days ago, they wired London for the long-awaited information, finally received a cable that the government had not yet received word from the dealers (or middlemen) as to just what the factories wanted.

This amazed U. S. army officers. Long ago, our war department eliminated the dealers, and did business direct with the manufacturers. But the British still seem to be struggling along under the cumbersome old system of buying and manufacturing through middlemen.

Merry-Go-Round.

CONGRESSMAN JED JOHNSON of Oklahoma took Roosevelt by surprise the other day by bringing his 5-months-old son to the executive offices. The president was equal to the occasion, dangled the baby on his knee, posed for the proud parents' movie camera, and closed the interview by saying: "This is a real treat, Jed. And it's easy to see from the boy's good looks that he takes after his mother." . . . The new federal circuit court judge for the sixth circuit is sure to go to Tennessee, will be a friend of Senator McKellar. . . . Paul Randolph, New York tax expert, probably will get the next federal judgeship in New York City. . . . Young Tom Dewey's managers leave nothing to chance. Weeks before his middle western appearances, his advance managers appear in a city to make sure that all goes well.

Landon and FDR.

THE barrage of statements and counter-statements about what Alf Landon said to Roosevelt and what Roosevelt said to him, all boil down to this: Landon drew a complete blank.

When Landon was invited to come to Washington, it was indicated that the president wanted to talk to him about two things: (1) Republican participation in the cabinet; and (2) how far the GOP was willing to go in supplying the Allies with tanks, guns, and airplanes so desperately needed.

But during their hour and a half togther, neither of these subjects was mentioned. Roosevelt talked about the sensational break through the French lines, about Latin American affairs, and about generalities. He carefully kept the conversation away from anything controversial.

Roosevelt was the height of cordiality, but actually he was just a bit miffed.

Reason was two speeches—one by Landon which Roosevelt considered unwarrantedly partisan; the other Lindbergh's attack on his foreign policy. Lindbergh, the White House knew, was extremely close to William R. Castle, jr., Hoover's under secretary of state and an official of the Republican national committee. Castle had helped inspire Lindbergh's previous radio broadcasts, and it was considered certain that he was the mainspring behind the last.

These speeches were delivered after Roosevelt had invited Landon to luncheon, but before Landon arrived. And in the interim, the president had decided that it was futile to discuss policy matters with a "political" Republican. He placed Landon in this category in contrast to Colonel Frank Knox, whom he has found willing to submerge party considerations on matters affecting the national interest.

Drink Money

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I KNOW A MAN who drives in and out from the suburban districts every day to work in a local manufacturing plant. The other day I saw him in a city market buying roses and a big box of cigars.

"It's a boy—had you heard," he told me. "She's doing fine. The roses are for her. The cigars are for the fellows at the shop—and I'll take a pound of smoking tobacco, too," he added to the clerk, naming a brand.

"Congratulations," I exclaimed. "Why it only seems a year or so since you began wearing long trousers — and here you're the father of a son!"

"I'm near 24," he declared, grinning. "And boy, have I had experience! I sowed wild oats for a year or two. I've cut out drinking, though, since I met my wife. You saw me buy that pound of tobacco—that was my treat to myself. I smoke a pipe. I got red roses for her, a silver spoon for the kid and a radio for the car, with my drink money this payday. It's surprising how even a few drinks a day count up. I'd rather take home a beefsteak or a box of strawberries for supper or buy a new gadget for the car that we both can enjoy than guzzle all alone, or with the crowd.

"My wings ain't sproutin' understand—but I'd always had a sneakin' notion that drink don't get a fellow far, and might even make a fool of me. So when I found a girl that thought the same and would back me in stayin' sober, I climbed on the wagon. I've had a promotion since—that encouraged me some, and made her proud. She says the high moguls of a business watch their men closer than the men realize."

"There's always room at the top," I told him. "You're on the right track."

I watched him swing jauntily down the street past a liquor store and stop for a newspaper and a magazine at a corner stand. He's good looking and he's square and he's fond of fun. He's almost 24 and is not waiting for a promotion, but is running to meet it.

My guess is that in a few more years he will hold a position of trust in the establishment where he is just a worker now. Then a lot of other men will envy him his "good luck."
